

Good Afternoon

On July 1 2010 trade measurement will become the responsibility of The National Measurement Institute (NMI). NMI is a division of Department of Innovation, Industry, Science and Research in the Australian Government.

This is preliminary advice that there will be information sessions running in Hobart on 5 March 2010.

All relevant industry bodies and stakeholders are being asked to attend to ensure that everyone is prepared for the transition of trade measurement responsibilities from state jurisdiction to the commonwealth.

So please Hold the date!

Venue locations and times are still to be confirmed. Further announcements and registration forms will be uploaded to the NMI website in the coming week.

For any further queries please contact this office or visit the NMI website regularly.
